

Bouhan Falligant Attorney Becomes Member of Maritime Law Association

Bouhan Falligant attorney Luke Bradley recently became an associate member of the Maritime Law Association (MLA) of the United States, a national professional organization of lawyers who practice in maritime or admiralty law.

The MLA exists as a venue for maritime lawyers to discuss news and issues in the practice, as a source of opinion and information to the public and as a representative to the international legal community. Its members are law students, lawyers, industry representatives, judges, and more.

Bradley, an associate at Bouhan Falligant, focuses his practice primarily on civil litigation. He received degrees from Duke University in history and political science and attended the University of Georgia School of Law, where he graduated summa cum laude. Bradley previously served as a law clerk to the Honorable B. Avant Edenfield of the Southern District of Georgia.
