Bouhan Falligant LLP does not represent that such sites are accurate or that the information contained therein is correct, nor does Bouhan Falligant LLP assert any claim to copyright or right to any information provided in such links. Bouhan Falligant LLP expressly disclaims any authorization to use trade names, registered trademarks, logos, seals or other copyrighted information contained in such links.

Confidentiality

Members of Bouhan Falligant LLP treat information provided by Clients as confidential and strictly comply with the provisions of Bar rules and the legal requirements to keep such information confidential.

Bouhan Falligant LLP collects nonpublic personal information (NPI) from the following sources:

- Information received from Clients on applications, forms or communications.
- Information about transactions with the Firm or others.
- Information provided by or on behalf of Clients in connection with matters handled by the firm.

The Firm restricts access to NPI to those Applicable Parties who need to know that information to provide legal services to our Clients. The Firm maintains physical, electronic, and procedural safeguards that comply with federal regulations to guard NPI.

We may disclose any of the above information that we collect to third parties as permitted by law and pursuant to our ethical requirements as attorneys.

WE DO NOT DISCLOSE ANY NONPUBLIC PERSONAL INFORMATION WITH ANYONE FOR ANY PURPOSE THAT IS NOT SPECIFICALLY PERMITTED BY LAW.
