

Georgia courts limit landlord liability

Recent decisions in Georgia's appellate courts have reiterated that landlords may be able to rely on the language in their leases to protect them from frivolous lawsuits.

Two of the cases that Georgia appellate courts decided this summer involved tenants suing their apartment complexes for damages related to injuries that occurred on the premises.

Click here to view original article.